DEFEND THE HUDSON Stop Polluters

The level of federal funding for clean water infrastructure has dropped from 78% in 1978 to 3% in 2007.

WHY WE CARE:

A change in the chemical, physical, biological, and radiological quality of water that is injurious to its existing, intended, or potential uses (for example, boating, waterskiing, swimming, the consumption of fish, and the health of aquatic organisms and ecosystems). The term "water pollution" generally refers to human-induced (anthropogenic) changes to water quality. Thus, the discharge of toxic chemicals from a pipe or the release of livestock waste into a nearby water body is considered pollution. Conversely, nutrients that originate from animals in the wild or toxins that originate from natural processes are not considered pollution. Read more >

CAMPAIGN COMPONENTS:

▼ Pollution Enforcement

In Brief: Riverkeeper has been leading the fight to keep sewage out of the Hudson River and its tributaries for nearly three decades. As treatment plants and sewer lines fail, water quality suffers, endangering human health and the environment. Today, sewage threatens to become the primary pollutant imperiling the Hudson. Why We Care

A change in the chemical, physical, biological, and radiological quality of water that is injurious to its existing, intended, or potential uses (for example, boating, waterskiing, swimming, the consumption of fish, and the health of aquatic organisms and ecosystems). The term "water pollution" generally refers to human-induced (anthropogenic) changes to water quality. Thus, the discharge of toxic chemicals from a pipe or the release of livestock waste into a nearby water body is considered pollution. Conversely, nutrients that originate from animals in the wild or toxins that originate from natural processes are not considered pollution.

Water pollution can threaten human health when pollutants enter the body via skin exposure or through the direct consumption of contaminated food or drinking water. Priority pollutants, including dichlorodiphenyl trichloroethane (DDT) and polychlorinated biphenyls (PCBs), persist in the natural environment and bioaccumulate in the tissues of aquatic organisms. These persistent organic pollutants are transferred up the food chain (in a process called biomagnification), and they can reach levels of concern in fish species that are eaten by humans.

The Storm King Case

One of the earliest lawsuits to establish that citizens may sue for environmental and aesthetic harms was the Storm King Mountain case in 1965.
